P3a. Description

This is a late Queen Anne house which displays the characteristic Queen Anne canted front bay and porch, but is less delicate in detailing and more robust in form and massing than is typical of earlier examples. Rectangular in plan, the house is two-story with a gable on hip roof in which the gable is very prominent and steeply pitched. The gable is trimmed and has two paired double hung windows in the center. A shed roof dormer is located on the east slope of the roof. The hip eaves have exposed rafters. The front façade is divided between a canted bay and a narrow porch which is cut into the front façade. Fenestration is one-over-one double hung. The primary roof covers the porch and is supported at the corner on a Tuscan column. The house is set on a raised foundation and overall has a very vertical thrust. A steep wooden stair accesses the porch and entry. The gable end is finished with fish scale shingles and the house is clad with clapboard.
