*P3a. Description:

This Bungalow style house has a cross gable roof of moderate pitch with wide overhangs and exposed rafters and purlins. A prominent front gable extends to cover the full-length front porch which is supported on battered posts. A closed brick rail encloses the porch which is accessed via concrete steps. The entry and fenestration are symmetrically arranged on the front façade. Front windows are fixed, while other windows are double hung with one-over-one sash. The solid entry door exhibits a decorative glazing pattern in the upper half. The house is clad with novelty siding.

The house is a good example of a Bungalow residence. This was a very popular style in the 1920s and occurs throughout California. In the Downtown Historic District area, bungalows appear on several streets and were constructed as infill houses on lots that were not developed in the late 19th century or they replaced earlier residences. These bungalows exemplify a particular period in the town's development (1910-1925) and represent the local adoption of a widely popular form of building. This house embodies many of the basic characteristics of the Bungalow Style including the roof form, wide overhangs, exposed rafters and purlins, symmetrical façade arrangement, and novelty siding. The house retains its integrity of location, setting, design, materials, workmanship, feeling and association. The house was surveyed in 1986 and designated as a contributing element in the Downtown District. The house should continue in this status.
